* ` --- # Introduction to Photoshop As a one-time novice in post-processing, I definitely do not feel qualified to teach you how to use Photoshop. But I do feel I have a good understanding of Photoshop's functionality and the point of view it puts on things, so I'll outline a few basic concepts that any Photoshop newbie would understand. This book is to be a companion, not a manual, for new users of Photoshop—however, in the interest of a new user starting with Photoshop, I've purposefully eliminated material from this book that won't be useful, or maybe even applicable, to a beginner. My goal is to keep the book as short and straightforward as possible, with a strictly practical aim: to teach you how to use Photoshop, to make a great image, and to create a professional-quality image from scratch. One of my goals is to take you from knowing nothing about Photoshop to where you can create and edit images that are professionally ready for print or onscreen publication. I feel this is achievable with a focused approach to learning. I've tried to keep the book quite short, and when I've kept my explanations vague or oversimplified, I've explained why I've done so. The intention is to provide a guided tour of Photoshop, with information introduced in a simple, logical, usable, step-by-step manner. # Part I. Photoshop Basics Photoshop is a large, powerful image-editing program, with a lot of functionality. There are a lot of different ways to work with Photoshop, and you can go about learning it in a number of different ways. The tutorials in this book are for people who are learning Photoshop from scratch. So if you've never used Photoshop before, this is a good place to start. In this part of the book, you'll find information on the various features of the program, and what they do. If you are familiar with Photoshop, or have used it before, and want to learn the program from a different perspective—and use it to create images that you're proud of—you may like to review Chapter 1, "Photoshop's Basic Settings and Palettes," in this section first. # Chapter 1. Photoshop's Basic Settings and Palettes The first step in learning Photoshop is to understand what it's like to

Q: How to call Angular4 Component method on form submit I am building an Angular4 app and I need to do an API call whenever a particular component's method is called. I have tried to do a @HostListener() to a submit button, but the method seems not to be triggered. How can I execute a method when a button is clicked or a submit button is clicked? A: Here is the answer (thanks to Mitar) The submit button I used, was on the form element. Then I used the built-in event Emitter of Angular. Component.OnInit(): this.myForm.controls.email.valueChanges.subscribe(res => { console.log('value changed') }) Thanks for you answer Mitar, I appreciate it. In the past, it has been known to produce protective casing for articles so that the casing may be used as a standard in order to reduce the size of the article. For example, some cellular mobile telephones may comprise a cellular telephone casing including a single liquid crystal display (LCD) and three buttons. However, in order to be used as a standard, the casing must be able to accommodate a camera and an operating system. It is desired to reduce the amount of electronics used in order to reduce the overall size of the article. As one example, it is desired to reduce the size of the operating system in order to reduce the size of the cellular telephone. It is also desired to reduce the size of the LCD display in order to reduce the overall size of the cellular telephone. However, it may be difficult to reduce the size of the LCD display. It is desirable to provide an article with two components, where one component is a relatively large non-volatile block, and the second component is a relatively small non-volatile block. Q: Multiple data tables on a view are not returning to database correctly I have 5 tables which are joined to make up a view. The view is built in a SQL server 2005 view. I am using NHibernate in C# to update the view. It seems that when I update the view there is a slight problem and the changes are not getting saved correctly. The log file says that the entity manager is closing the session. I have tried turning on the statistics on both sql server and the view, but that seems to have no effect. What is wrong with my code?
